Overlooked Student Struggles to Fit In

DEAR ABBY: I'm having trouble with my daily life. I have become more reserved and rarely even look at people. All I do is my schoolwork. I have lost trust in quite a few people over the years, including most of my family members. My parents have taught me to trust almost no one and to always be afraid of strangers.

I recently started high school, and I have only talked with two or three people at the most. I have really bad social anxiety, and I'm treated different from my siblings. I'm feeling like my whole life is just a lie and that I'm nothing. I feel like people can't see me — that I'm invisible to everyone.

My family controls my life as if they are dictators. I've lost control over any decisions I make and anything I do. I don't know what to do anymore. I'm so lost. Please help me! — LOST IN EL PASO, TEXAS

DEAR LOST: I agree you need help, because I'm sure there's more to your situation — and possibly your family's — than you have shared. However, for you to overcome your distrust of others and the feeling that you are "invisible," you will need to confide in a trusted teacher or counselor at school.

You need more help than I can provide in a letter or my column. Licensed mental health providers routinely help individuals who suffer from social anxiety disorder, but in order to get that help, you will have to find the courage to reach out and ask for it.

DEAR ABBY: Last year I started a relationship with a woman. At first everything seemed to flow smoothly, but after a few months we started arguing. We both had issues with irritability and expressing ourselves.

"Nancy" and I broke up seven times in a four-month period. For reasons I have yet to understand, after each breakup and once we had time to cool off, we both wanted to get back together.

We recently went our separate ways again and I thought this was the last time. She has now contacted me and casually proposed getting together to "hang out" for a while. Without batting an eye, I agreed.

I don't know if I'm hung up on her because I'm truly in love with her, or because I'm just unable to move on. As a couple, we work together well — as long as we aren't together every day. As friends, there's always an undertone of romantic interest.

I can't make heads or tails of my emotions concerning her, or hers for me. Any advice? — UNABLE TO MOVE ON

DEAR UNABLE TO MOVE ON: Have you discussed this with Nancy? If you haven't, you should. If you both would like more from your relationship than you have been getting, it might benefit the two of you to have some couples counseling.

Sometimes people can be attracted to each other and care about each other, but something prevents the relationship from jelling. Because this push-pull has been going on for so long, it's time to find out the cause.

DEAR READERS: To those of you living where daylight saving time is observed, I offer this reminder: Don't forget to turn your clocks forward one hour at bedtime tonight. Daylight saving time begins at 2 a.m. tomorrow. Spring is coming!

Vikander Attends Vuitton; Montcler 'Snowed' In

PARIS (AP) — Still basking in the media spotlight since her acclaimed performance in "The Danish Girl," all eyes were on Oscar winner Alicia Vikander at Louis Vuitton's star-filled show Wednesday.

Here are the highlights of the fall-winter 2016 collections, including reports from Vuitton and Moncler Gamme Rouge.

Vikander wowed the fashion media at Vuitton on Wednesday morning in a pared down, geometric Nicolas Ghesquiere look that proved that less is more.

With no makeup and a chic messy center parting, the 27-year-old Swedish actress rocked a navy statement coat with cream bands and cropped pants.

The look's geometry perfectly mirrored the Louis Vuitton Foundation backdrop as she posed for photos — with its figurative angular glass, wood and metal architecture, designed by architect Frank Gehry.

LOUIS VUITTON ON FORM

Ghesquiere produced one of his most accomplished Vuitton collections to date Wednesday with 52 creative looks brimming with color and energy.

Alongside the giant reflective disco-ball column decor, a model with huge '80s hair opened the show with a fresh silhouette that recurred throughout: a strong-shouldered coat truncated under the bust in bolero style.

It cut a great shape, and led on to some very creative explorations of form like corset styles with large exaggerated curves.

Ghesquiere is a sports fan. Here, the signature sportswear styles were subtly evoked on looks that seemed inspired by Nineties' motorbike jackets.

Flashes of red, white and blue stripes graced sheeny tight-fitting leather jackets.

And in one of the more interesting looks — the normally harsh biking stripes appeared as a contradiction on a fluffy woolen sweater that called out to be hugged.

This varied collection will broaden the house's appeal from the overly young looks that characterized the French designer's debut.

MONCLER GAMME ROUGE'S HILLS ARE ALIVE

Giambattista Valli headed to the Austrian hills of "The Sound of Music" for his snowy, Edelweiss-infused collection Wednesday that was executed with finesse.

Since he took over this arm of Moncler, the floral-loving Italian designer has set most of his shows upon a hill or meadow to combine the house's outdoorsy vibe with his love of flowers.

Wednesday's show was no exception — and the snow-capped peaks of the Tyrol were the season's backdrop to looks that riffed on traditional Tyrolean dress.

The "dirndl," a traditional Alpine peasant dress worn in Germany, Austria and the South Tyrol, was reimagined in white fur, sheer tulle and embroideries as the suspenders.

Pale blue tights, meanwhile, led down to black leather platform clogs. Valli is a master of detail.

Snow appeared as an optical blurry print in one short coattress — and, elsewhere, morphed into the endangered Edelweiss flower as immortalized by the Oscar-winning film.

GEARING UP FOR MARCH MADNESS

With March Madness in the air, Mountaineer fans who want to show off their team spirit can now do it in style with Mountaineer logo-embazoned gear, offered by Little Earth Productions of Pittsburgh, also makers of the Pittsburgh Steelers Terrible Towel. The new gear includes the sheer infinity scarf, left, which can be worn in multiple ways, and the handy team jersey purse, made from jersey fabric in official team colors with an adjustable strap for over-the-shoulder or cross-body wear. Hair bands and bandanas also are available.

Life Times

Life is full of change, from your engagement and wedding to new family members coming along. There also are anniversaries to consider, as well as special community events with which you might be involved.

Here at The Intelligencer and Wheeling News-Register, our goal is to make publishing this information in the newspaper as easy for you as possible — after all, we understand that life is full of enough demands. You Said 'Yes'

So, you've just been swept off your feet by the most romantic marriage proposal ever. Now it's time to let the Ohio Valley know how you feel about your special someone.

If you are submitting an engagement photo and announcement to be published in our Saturday edition, we would like to receive the information and photo on Tuesday.

Time to Say 'I Do'

So, the big day is coming: you're getting married. And you want to make sure everyone in the Ohio Valley knows about it.

The newspapers will publish a black-and-white photo at no charge, and we offer color photos for $50 for those looking for something different. If your photographer has placed a copyright mark on your photo, we need a written release from the photographer before we can publish the picture.

For Sunday publication the weekend of your wedding, the picture and information should be in our offices by 10:30 a.m. the Tuesday prior to your wedding day. This information as well as your photo and phone number can be emailed to bbethel@theintelligencer.net, or you can drop it in the mail or bring it to our offices at 1500 Main St., Wheeling, WV 26003. Weddings that have already taken place may be submitted at any time, and also will run in our Sunday edition.

If you mail or drop off your photo, please include a self-addressed stamped envelope, and we will return your photo after publication.

The Years Fly By

You and your spouse have weathered the good times and the bad, and either you or your children want to mark your special day by publishing it in the newspaper. Anniversary articles will be published on Sunday for all couples celebrating 20 years or more. For those marking 40 years or more, we will accept pictures, as well.

New Arrivals

Your family is growing, and you couldn't be prouder. When sending a birth announcement, you are welcome to include the names of siblings, parents, grandparents and great-grandparents. For families branding a remarkable five generations, please send us the photograph and names, and we will be happy to share this with our readers.

The Days of Our Lives

We would be happy to help promote your special event, class reunion, fundraiser, dinner, college news or club activity.

Life always changes, and we look forward to serving you. We want to remind you that all of your photos and information can be emailed to us at bbethel@theintelligencer.net, or via mail at Life Department, The Intelligencer/Wheeling News-Register, 1500 Main St., Wheeling, WV 26003.
